

Dr Abbe Brown is a Lecturer in Information Technology Law at the University of Edinburgh and is an Associate of the AHRC/SCRIPT research centre. AHRC/SCRIPT is engaged in research, consultancy and policy contribution in all aspects of technology and law. Before academia, Abbe spent almost 10 years as a solicitor in London, Melbourne and Edinburgh, specialising in IP and commercial litigation. Abbe has expertise in all aspects of information technology and intellectual property, with particular interest in the interaction between IT, IP and other legal fields and the place of this in meeting the theoretical and practical challenges of evolving technologies. Abbe maintains strong links with industry and practitioners and also has a deep interest in public engagement - which led to World IP Day sessions for primary school classes. She is a member of the Society of Computers & Law, ILA, SLS, SLISA, Competition Law Scholars Forum and the Scottish Competition Law Forum.
